Indicators for wellbeing in the older age – in all ages! – to be connected, with people, with changes in society

Be active
Physically, mentally, socially

Keep learning
Be open-minded for new things in society, science, technology

Share your knowledge Look for people who need help, older, younger, migrants, ...

Take responsibility Look what is happening around you
Where you can act

Make the best out of all personal life situations

Why it is important to learn how to handle new media tools – To be connected on local, national and international level

- You can learn
- You can share
- You can take responsibility
- You can get help and give help
- You can compensate in restricted mobility
- And many other things

You don't need to decide between the real and the virtual

Both have benefits and combined in useful ways it is empowering

New approaches tested in our projects

Hallo

How are you?

In times of Corona, we had been challenged to use these and other tools and we are excited about all the possibilities to build up virtual communities. Combined with real encounters, it will be a strong factor for wellbeing – for all ages. We are curious to learn about your experiences.
